A. Please provide a brief course description.

B. Please explain how your course contributes to the Global Learning component of Hope's General Education curriculum (as described in the College Catalog).

More specifically, how does your course help students understand the connections between themselves and people from different places, identities and/or worldviews? How will students acquire the skills and knowledge to interact with and learn from people different from themselves?

C. Which three (or more) of the general Global Learning goals will your course emphasize? Please explain.

- Curiosity - stimulating students' pursuit of new knowledge and ideas, and openness to new perspectives.

- Knowledge - broadening and deepening of students' knowledge in the natural and applied sciences, arts, humanities, and social sciences, while engaging the global concerns that touch each of these fields.

- Self-Awareness - developing students' awareness of themselves as shaped by culture and of how one's values and beliefs inform one's decisions and assumptions about others.

- Empathy - cultivating students' empathy, sensitivity and compassion toward others.

- Responsibility - building students' sense of responsibility for the welfare of others and for their own actions, so that they grow as ethical individuals and engaged citizens.

D. Which two (or more) of the following specific goals for GL-International courses will your course address? Please explain.

- Use comparative analysis of cultural perspectives.
- Analyze the concepts used to study and compare cultures.
- Address the culture's self-definition and self-expression.
- Focus on theoretical perspectives of gender, race, class, ethnicity and other socially constructed categories.

E. How will you communicate these goals to your students?

F. How will you evaluate your students' progress in reaching these goals (general and specific)?

G. Please provide a brief explanation of the attached assignment and how it relates to the Global Learning goals.
